MESA 3. LA ESTRATEGIA ENERGÉTICA 2030: HACIA UN NUEVO MODELO ENERGÉTICO

At the European level, she is chair of the Customers and Retail Markets Working Group of the Council of European Energy Regulators (CEER), the voice of Europe's national regulators of electricity and gas at EU and international level. CEER's members and observers (from 33 European countries) are the statutory bodies responsible for energy regulation at national level.

At the international level, she is co-chair of the Virtual Working Group on Technology Change of ICER, the International Confederation of Energy Regulators, a voluntary framework for cooperation between energy regulators from around the globe.

Her main responsibility is to participate in the European and international energy policy debate and promote competitive and innovative retail energy markets working in the interest of consumers.

Formerly at the head of an executive CRE's directorate for 5 years, she led the programme for opening French electricity and gas markets to competition. She also managed the calls for tender for developing the generation of electricity from renewable sources and the related public funding.

Since 2004 in energy regulation, Patricia previously held various corporate strategy, business developments and general management positions in major telecom companies, in Europe and abroad.

Patricia holds two MScs, one from Ecole Polytechnique and one from Telecom ParisTech, she graduated from Paris-Dauphine university in international affairs and is an alumnus of INSEAD business school.

She is married and the mother of 3 children.
